NEW TREATMENT ALERT!!!

INTRODUCING CRYO FACIAL with liquid nitrogen

The Cryofacial was developed as a cryogenic treatment that improves the health and youthful appearance of clients' skin by using a controlled beam of vaporized liquid nitrogen to freeze skin found on the face, scalp, and neck area. In rejuvenating the skin, the cryo facial also restores radiance, soothes inflammation and improves skin texture and tone.

As featured in Vogue Magazine

“How’s the ice facial?” my husband Will texted me the other day. He meant to write “Cryo Facial,” the next big trend in anti-aging that, via blasts of cold vapor and light therapy, is meant to boost cell rejuvenation and collagen as well as plump the face, but I didn’t bother to correct him. I was still flying high from my 45 minutes with medical aesthetician Elena Wawrzynski, which included a microdermabrasion session, LED light therapy, and yes, freezing, ice-cold air—like negative 225 degrees Fahrenheit freezing—blown across my forehead, cheeks, neck, and chin.
